

Princess Caroline is truly a Children's Champion

PRINCESS Caroline was recently invited to Boston in the US to be awarded the UNICEF Children's Champion Award.

The accolade was given in recognition of her long standing devotion to helping the needs of the world's children, particularly in her role as the President of AMADE (Association Mondiale des Amis de L'Enfance) which was started up in 1963 by her mother, Princess Grace.

The Princess said she was 'very pleased and proud' to accept the award which she did on behalf of AMADE's Secretary-General Francis Kasasa and the organisation's many volunteers.

HRH Princess Caroline with Francis Kasasa, Secretary General of AMADE

Previous recipients include Queen Noor of Jordan, Nelson Mandela and Roger Moore.